SMART PEOPLE ARE SWITCHING OFF

Michela Cole reports

In this age of 'technology addicts', more and more people are discovering the benefits of switching off their digital devices, even for a few hours a day. Take Gina, for example. She used to spend more time with her tablet than with her kids. 'We didn't use to chat or do anything together.' Now they have 'No tech Sundays'. 'We're a happier family now,' she says.

Alex used to check his phone several times during the night. Now, he always switches it off when he goes to bed. 'I didn't use to sleep very well,' he says. 'Now, I sleep like a baby!'

In Chloe's house, mealtimes used to be silent. 'We used to eat with our phones in our hands. We didn't use to talk at all.' Last month, her family banned phones at meals. 'Now, we eat more slowly and we have real conversations. It's great!'

I love technology and I use it every day, but I also agree with Gina, Alex and Chloe: it's important to know when to switch it off.

A magazine article

Use the title to capture the reader's attention: Smart people are switching off

Present the context and the facts at the beginning: ... more and more people are discovering the benefits of ...

Use quotations from real people to make the article more interesting: 'I didn't use to sleep very well,' he says.

Include a personal opinion at the end: 'I love technology and I use it every day ...'

Remember!

We use used to to talk about something that happened regularly in the past, but doesn't happen anymore. Used to does not have a present form. You can't say I use to walk to school. You can say I usually walk to school.
