Student life is great for meeting new people. But sometimes students feel homesick, lonely, or stressed. This is normal. Here are some ideas to help you:

- leave your room—study at your university or college instead
- join clubs and societies, and do sports with other people
- get to know people one by one, not always in big groups
- ask people to go for a coffee, a walk, a meal, or to see a movie
- remember: maybe you'll meet your new best friends in your first few months, or maybe you'll meet them later. Don't worry about when it will happen.

© Stella Cottrell (2013)

1 Check (✓) the good ways of getting to know new people.

- 1 Go to your university library to study.
- 2 Always study at home in your room.
- 3 Join a student club.
- 4 Go running by yourself.
- 5 Spend a lot of time with big groups of people.
- 6 Talk to people one by one.
- 7 Ask somebody to go for a coffee.
- 8 Go to see a movie alone.
- 9 Spend all your time with the friends you made in the first month.

2 Work with a partner. Which things from Exercise 1 do you do? Which things do you want to do in the future?

3 Discuss these questions with a partner.

- 1 Is it easy or difficult for you to meet new friends at your university or college?
It's easy / difficult to make new friends.
- 2 Where are some good places at your university or college for meeting new people?
