The year is 1801 and autumn is drawing to an end. Though it was only two days ago that I became a tenant in this old house – Thrushcross Grange, I can already say a few interesting things about the neighbourhood and the people who inhabit it. The countryside here in Yorkshire is absolutely breathtaking – one of the most splendid in England! There is a park surrounding the house and beyond the park there are the moors. I have come to this wild and isolated part of northern England because I want to stay away from all relatives and acquaintances. The housekeeper here at Thrushcross Grange is a middle-aged woman called Nelly Dean. She looks after me well, but she seems to be a woman of few words, so I shall have a peaceful time. Especially that no one lives nearby. The village of Gimmerton is six miles away.

I have rented Thrushcross Grange for a year from my nearest neighbour, Mr Heathcliff. I have just returned from a visit to his place and I must say he is a rather stony and wicked man who avoids people. When I arrived early this afternoon, he was standing by the gate, leaning against it, completely untroubled by my coming closer.

‘Are you Mr Heathcliff?’ I asked.

He nodded his head but did not speak to me, which already gave me a reason to believe he was not a good-natured man.

‘I’m Lockwood, your new tenant at Thrushcross Grange,’ I said politely. ‘I thought I should call on you.’

After examining me for a while, eventually he said, ‘Come in.’ Then he turned and walked away from me towards the house.

It's time to devote some of my time, energy and space to my hometown, my neighbourhood, my place on Earth. Do I live in a perfect place? What would I change here? It all started with some news on TV. It turns out my town was voted the worst place to live in this part of the country. I must say I found the news quite outrageous! Why is my hometown so terrible? I've always felt I've got everything I need here. I've never witnessed any crime. I think that life here is just the same as anywhere else. I'd love to know what made people here so bitter. Anyway, I'm about to write a letter to the TV station which announced to the whole country what a bad place my city is. Any suggestions as to what the letter should contain? Waiting for your comments.

Just a quick note to let you know that the headmaster's announcement appeared in the school paper yesterday. It seems that the sports day will be organised on Saturday after all. We have to hand in all our suggestions for that day by the end of next week. Have you thought about that students/teachers race? It's going to be great fun if we do it right. Infectious diseases are the ones that can be spread from one person to another in various ways. They are caused by viruses, bacteria or parasites to name just a few. While some of these diseases are fairly easy to treat, others are very dangerous. One of the deadliest is malaria – a disease that is spread by mosquitoes. It is in fact caused by a type of microorganism that is present in some female mosquitoes. So whenever you go to a country where malaria is a serious risk, don't forget to prepare yourself. Most importantly, use mosquito spray to repel infected insects. The good news is malaria is not transmitted through casual contact.

THE VIRGIN AND THE GYPSY

The childhood of the two sisters, Lucille and Yvette Saywell, could be considered quite carefree. It was only when Lucille was nine and Yvette seven that their lives became miserable as a result of a shocking incident that occurred in their family. 6.1. ____ The event came as a surprise to all the neighbours, as the girls' father, Arthur Saywell, the local vicar, was a handsome man and had a reputation as a good husband. 'Why had the vicar's wife left him?' they would ask. Lucille and Yvette couldn't make sense of their mother's decision either. 6.2. ____

As a result of these unfortunate events, the vicar no longer felt the need to stay in the parish where he had worked for so long. So when he was offered a job as the rector of Pepplewick, a small village in the north of England, he did not hesitate. The family went to live in the rectory, which stood just outside the village and was an ugly stone house, with the River Papple running just beside it.

The rector's mother, and his sister Aunt Cissie, came to live with him and his two daughters. The rector's mother – or Granny, as the girls would call her – was over seventy years old, but she readily took over the housewife's duties. Knowing how upset the rector was when his wife had left, Granny never spoke about Cynthia to her son. To the girls' surprise, Granny now considered herself to be the most important person in the house.

6.3. ____ She knew that everything would have to change then.

Adapted from Macmillan Readers 'Selected Stories' by D.H. Lawrence

- A. Perhaps she didn't love them. Perhaps they hadn't been good daughters.
- B. It made the girls miss their first stay in the south home even more. They remembered it very clearly and talked about it a lot.
- C. She was in charge of everyone and made them do what she pleased or thought was right. She enjoyed being in that position and didn't want Cynthia to come back.
- D. Their mother, Cynthia, left their father and ran away with a young, penniless man.
