Track 01

Girl: Oh my gosh! Have you seen this? It's amazing! Would you fancy a ride in such a beauty?

Boy: I sure would! But, to be honest, I prefer military aircraft. Anything connected with the army, really. And working with military aircraft is my dream, in fact.

Girl: Wow! That sounds impressive.

Boy: But I love it here anyway. It's been an annual event here for four years now and I missed it only once, last year. How about you? Are you having a good time?

Girl: I haven't seen anything this exciting for quite some time.

Boy: What do you like most?

Girl: I particularly liked the hydroplane boats yesterday and the exhibition with technological gadgets. You can learn so much about aviation here and it's far more interesting than a regular museum.

Boy: That's true! Well, I wasn't here yesterday to see the hydroplanes, but the programme for today is a lot better. And I intend to see everything. Let's start with the display here. I read in the programme that you can go inside some of these planes.

Girl: Really?

Boy: Yeah. And then we can watch the acrobatics show. Have you brought the ear plugs? It's going to get really noisy with all the jet engines roaring.

Girl: Yes, yes, I'm prepared for that. I checked their website before coming here, just to make sure I take everything I need.

Track 02

I'm not sure if I want to change my phone yet. I've come here to look around. The staff here is very helpful and answers any questions you may have about mobile phones. They showed me how to use some of the features in my phone and once they directed my wife to a reliable repair centre. But most importantly, they've got hundreds of models to offer, most of them at relatively good prices. So I'm just checking out the options.

A few days ago I bought a used phone and since day one I've had problems with some of the basic operations. I've been to several shops already, but nobody could help me so far. In the repair centre someone told me to come here, to the showroom. Well, I've got problems with some of the applications and I need someone to show me what I should do with them. I think the phone would work better if I knew how to operate it properly.

2.3.

These things always happen to me! I always face difficulty using my electronic equipment. It's the third time I've bought a device that stopped working a few days later. This time I bought a phone which broke after only three weeks. I tried to repair it but it just won't work. I've took it back to the shop where I'd bought it, but the person there was extremely rude. He said it was not his problem and sent me away. So I'm going to write to his manager to inform her what kind of service her staff offer.

Track 03

OK, so, I'll tell you about one I saw a few years ago when I lived in Paris. I must say it was a great time for me because I could regularly explore world-famous museums and I used every opportunity to admire artistic creations across the city. Anyway, I'd like to describe something I saw during a visit to the Musée D'Orsay. There were lots of good works in that museum, but this one really caught my eye. It was so different from anything else I've ever seen. I can't recall its title or the name of the artist. It doesn't matter though. What's important is that it was so impressive that I'll never forget it. I guess it was painted in the 60s or 70s, and it was quite modern. It showed a man riding on a horse, holding something strange in his hand. It looked like a globe or a ball. The colours were dark and grey and only this thing in his hand was white. You may say it was scary, but for me it was simply very gloomy and depressive. Anyway, I'm not really good at describing art and it isn't really my hobby, all I'm capable of saying is whether I like something or not. And I can say without any doubt that this painting made such a huge impression on me I might even call it my favourite.
