Track 01

Text 1.

My name is Roland and I'm a researcher. I've been in the business for quite a few years now. The best thing about my job is that no two days are the same. Also, as a freelancer I'm the one to decide who I work for. And trust me, I've done all sorts of things – I collect and analyse data for corporate managers, I do surveys for journalists, I engage in research and development projects for different companies and industries. One drawback of the job is the difficulty of actually finding work. You won't find job advertisements for researchers and it's only thanks to personal contacts that we find business.

Text 2.

Woman: So who's going to take care of your house when you're on holiday?

Man: Oh, I've found that company, Housesitters. They take care of your house while you're away and they spend time in the house so that it doesn't seem empty.

Woman: Can you trust them? Have you checked them with the police?

Man: Well, they've been voted one of the top five in this sort of service when it comes to security. Plus, I'm pretty much convinced the house will be safer than leaving it unattended for three weeks. You don't need the police statistics to figure that out.

Woman: Do you know who will be coming here?

Man: Some pensioners will. Fortunately, there won't be any students coming here to have a party.

Woman: Oh, I thought I could apply for a job there – it sounds like a great job opportunity for me.

Man: Well, not really, because they only employ elderly people from what I've been told.

Text 3.

Today I'd like to say a few words about healthy eating. Let's face it, the dietary habits of most people in this country leave a lot to be desired, which has been confirmed by a number of studies. We usually grab something to eat without much consideration as to its nutritional values, we don't follow regular mealtimes, we enjoy fast foods a bit too much. Although there are numerous books with healthy recipes and useful websites, we rarely use them mainly due to the popular misconception that our weight is genetically determined. And my aim today is to draw your attention to all the potential threats of bad eating with the hope that it might make you think again about what you eat.

Track 02

2.1.

A funny thing happened to me when I was in hospital some time ago. It was at the time when I had constant headaches. Anyway, I was referred to the neurology department, because my doctor wanted to run some tests. Well, you know what the staff is like in hospitals – they seem to be sulky and frowning all the time. But not this time. They were all kind, helpful and grinning most of the time. I knew from the start that something was wrong. Only two days later when someone called me Bruce, did I realise they had mistaken me for that famous actor!

2.2.

Whatever you hear about hospitals is probably true. I mean it's outrageous how they treat patients. And my case is no different. It was three years ago and I went to hospital for some thorough tests. They were supposed to last three days and I was to be sent home afterwards. On the second day of my stay there, because of a mix up, I was taken to the operating theatre where they wanted to cut me open! It turned out they had another patient with the same name. It was pure luck that nothing bad happened.

2.3.

Last year I had a bad knee injury and I had to be operated on. It was almost two days after the operation when suddenly I started feeling acute pain in my knee. And guess what! I was begging the nurse for three hours to give me a painkiller and she wouldn't come. Then I asked for the doctor, because I felt something was going wrong and he had no time to see me for another three hours. So I grabbed some crutches and somehow made it to the ward manager's office to protest against the lack of help. I was so exasperated that I even threatened to call the newspaper. As you can imagine, I was helped within 10 minutes!

Track 03

DJ: Hello, listeners. Today in the studio a person you know very well from other programmes on our radio – Martha Banks.

Martha: Hi, everyone!

DJ: Now, the reason you're here today is your new project, right?

Martha: Exactly! I'd like to tell you about a new series which is scheduled for next month. We think it's so interesting that we are already thinking about a sequel.

DJ: What's it called?

Martha: To be honest, we haven't decided yet. The working title is 'Stars gone too soon'.

DJ: OK, but you can tell us who it's going to be about.

DIAGNOZA SZKOLNA

Martha: Sure! We are going to shed light on the lives of musicians and actors who died prematurely.

DJ: Are you going to focus on the cause of their death?

Martha: Well, we can't just skip the topic of death altogether, but it's not the immediate focus of the programme. Rather, we want to look at what they created, why they became famous, what was so special about them, about their personality that took them to the top. We want to cast light on really talented artists, such as River Phoenix, Amy Winehouse, Heath Ledger and Brittany Murphy to name but a few.

DJ: It sounds fascinating! Can you brief us on the first episode?

Martha: Yeah. One of the first episodes will reveal the details of James Dean's life. It is common knowledge that he was a cultural icon for millions of young Americans and that he died in a car crash in 1955 at the peak of his popularity. Being handsome definitely contributed to his popularity, and complemented his talent. However, few people know that it was the last three films in which he starred in lead roles, which came out in 1955 and 1956, that actually won him stardom at the age of 24. We want to tell the listeners a bit more about his acting and private life. I hope this sneak peek raises your interest just enough to switch on for more.

DJ: Well, you've definitely caught my interest! Stay with us, we're coming back after the break.
